For apprentices and trainees

Find an employer

Unfortunately, we don't hold details of job vacancies and therefore can't match jobseekers with employers.

You'll need to find an employer in your chosen occupation to employ you as an apprentice or trainee.

You can be employed either:

- directly by a business, who will pay wages and train you with the support of a training organisation. Search for an employer by:
 - using internet job search engines. We suggest you enter a job title of 'apprentice' or 'trainee' as well as your chosen industry in the appropriate field(s)
 - visiting job websites

Search for an opportunity or information on Apprenticeships and Traineeships:

FROM Employment Training Community (ETC) page

Are you wondering how you can find a job in Australia?

There's no doubt that the Internet makes it far easier to search for jobs than ever before.

Whilst most people are familiar with SEEK, one of the largest online job boards available, there are other websites which are also worth checking out.

We've listed some of the best job search websites in Australia below to help you.

It's not necessary to follow all of these job boards – perhaps select two or three once you determine which ones best suit your needs.

seek.com.au

SEEK is Australia's largest single source of employment opportunities to address the needs of job seekers and hirers and facilitate the matching between job seekers and hirers across our online employment marketplaces.

jobsearch.gov.au

A leading provider of job search and employment opportunities in Australia. Search for jobs by location, job sector, industry or salary to find your dream job.
